Description job

There are two work environments. The first one is hanging unanesthetized broilers. This is an important job in the beginning of the production process. Together with your team you keep up a high pace, so your colleagues later in the process can do their work. That is the second environment: a production hall where chicken is being filleted.

What can I expect?

At Cooreman there is a real hands-on mentality. Communication lines are very short and there is a very involved culture. Lots of people are willing to help you, so you can learn your work activities very fast on-the-job. In the canteen there is a shared refrigerator and a microwave.

“Cooremans is a real family company, you feel like being part of the family very quickly”

What does Cooreman stand for?

In 30 years time Cooreman has developed from a small family business in Dendermonde into one of the largest poultry slaughterhouses in Belgium and the Netherlands. At Cooreman up to 30 million chickens are slaughtered, processed and transported to all corners of the world on an annual basis.

The chicken slaughterhouse is specialized in Halal slaughter and the fresh market. The company slogan says: Cooreman, they don't come any fresher!

Cooreman is a real family business where you as a customer and employee become part of the family.
